Summer splash takes a dip in 2015

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

A dip in funds and a slide in attendance led to the cancellation of the annual parks and recreation summer camps this year.

Summer Splash and Little Dipper camps at Grant County Park in Crittenden will not happen in 2015, but the plan is to retool the program for next year.

"This hasn't been an easy decision and one that pains us to make," Ben Oldiges, who was named parks director in March. "We're not going to waste this time. We're going to take a detailed look at the program and retool it, rework it and reintroduce these camps again in 2016 with more fun and excitement than ever."

The official announcement was made last week on the parks and recreation website and Facebook page less than a month before the camps were set to begin.

Grant County Deputy Judge-Executive Scott Kimmich said several factors were against making the camps work this summer.

Finances were an issue from the start of the year when newly elected Judge-Executive Steve Wood took over a budget passed by the previous fiscal court that only had funding for the first half of the fiscal year for a parks director.

"When we got here literally the parks director position had been abolished," Kimmich said. "So, we were a little bit behind the eight ball."

See SUMMER page 15

Quite frankly, our job as we saw it the first part of the year was to get through the fiscal year and ensure that we didn't do anything to blow a hole in the budget.

Ark viewing site open

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

Those interested in getting a look at the upcoming Ark Encounter as it is built now have their chance.

An observation site, located at 1000 Eibeck Lane, officially opened June 1 that allows spectators to watch as Amish crews build the $73 million attraction in Williamstown.

The lumber for the ark recently arrived in Grant County and the observation area provides onlookers a way to watch the crews assembling the lumber and timber framing in sections called bents, and then the placing of those bents on the foundation of piers.

The observation area will be open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. seven days a week throughout the summer.

Access may be canceled due to inclement weather or certain construction restrictions.

The site will be closed June 19 and Aug. 7.

There is a cost to watch from the observation area and tickets are required.

Tickets are $20 per vehicle at regular admission and $10 per vehicle for Creation Museum members.

For Ark Encounter Boarding Pass members, admittance is free, but a ticket is still needed.

Tickets can be reserved in advance online, or a limited number will be available on site each day.

Members and boarding pass holders must call reservations at 1-800-721-2298 to reserve tickets.

Due to a lack of space for turn around, buses, semis and RVs are prohibited.

Phase I of the Ark Encounter is scheduled to open in May 2016.

For more information, go to <https://arkencounter.com/visit-the-ark/>.

Brothers arrested in truck battery theft cases

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

Two Williamstown men may be responsible for a rash of truck battery thefts in recent months.

The Grant County Sheriff's Office arrested brothers Joshua Janson, 26, on May 22, and Brian Helton, 28, on May 27 on charges of theft by unlawful taking more than $500 and third-degree burglary.

Helton also had a bench warrant for contempt of court out of Kenton County.

While the charges stem from vehicle batteries and other items allegedly stolen April 25 and May 22, Sheriff Chuck Dills said the pair could be suspects in up to 20 additional cases.

"Between us and state police, we were just getting hammered with these thefts," Dills said. "All of these places that were hit had stuff stolen like batteries and miscellaneous metals they are taking to the scrap yard."

Comer conceded the election to Bevin after the recanvass results.

Bevin will now face Democratic challenger Jack Conway in the November general al election to see who is Kentucky's next governor.

Richard Heath also requested a recanvass in the race for agriculture commissioner against Ryan Quarles.

Yard sale enthusiasts are expected to travel U.S. 25 from Crittenden to Corinth today through Saturday for the fourth annual U.S. 25 yard sale.

The historic highway plays host to the nearly 250-mile yard sale that spans from the Ohio/Kentucky border through Tennessee to Georgia.

The U.S. 25 yard sale aims to mimic the popular U.S. 127 corridor sale, said Judy Wigginton, of Williamstown. Wigginton had the dream of the sale and has worked the last few years expanding its reach into other communities and states.

OUR OPINION

Some words for the graduates

Congratulations. You're an adult now.

You might be headed to college. Or you might be getting started right away by entering the workforce and finding employment.

Most of you have plans on where your life is headed. If you are lucky, you will realize those dreams. But reaching your goals will take hard work, perseverance and probably a little luck.

So to the high school seniors who graduated recently or are set to in the coming days, we offer these words of advice. You should heed them, because we are older and hopefully wiser and we have all been where you are.

You are likely to drop out of college

Sorry, but that's the stats. And don't even think that four years is enough.

The National Student Clearing House reported last year that 55 percent of students who entered college in the fall of 2008 finished with a degree by 2014.

While the odds might seem like a flip of the coin, you can take measures to improve your chances.

The good news for most of you is that traditional students attending full-time had a much higher completion rate (75 percent). The chances dropped significantly for those who did a combination of full and part-time (53 percent). And those who waited to start school until after they were 20 fared the worst (40 percent).

So if you are headed to college, go all-in. Some of you will have less financial means than others, and might have to also hold down a job, but the six years of sacrifice will pay off if you realize your dreams.

Your boss is not your teacher

Teachers are authority figures, and many don't get the respect they deserve from their pupils.

But they had to put up with some of your smart mouths in class. Your boss doesn't. He or she will fire you for mouthing off — or fire you for not showing up, showing up late, not completing your assignments, arguing with your coworkers and a whole host of other reasons.

The state was obligated to keep you enrolled in school. There is no similar law for employers.

And believe it or not, acting responsibly and professionally will actually make you stand out. Employers call them "soft skills." According to one survey by the Workforce Solutions Group, 60 percent of employers say applicants lack such skills, even among college graduates.

Take a chance

Most of you are free of responsibility. Most of you do not have families or children or other people depending on you. Take advantage of this time.

Take that low-paying job that might lead to bigger and better things. You can scrape to get by now.

Travel and see new things. Get out of your comfort zone. If you love your hometown, there is nothing wrong with wanting to live there your whole life. But you have to know what is out there to provide the context for appreciating where you come from, or to find someplace where you will be happier.

You are unique

You are the first class to graduate that had yet to go to school before the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. Facebook was founded when you were first-graders, and Twitter while you were still learning to read. You have probably never used a rotary phone. You are the most technologically literate generation ever.

You can change the status quo. You will see things from a perspective that didn't exist one generation ago.

And we are counting on you. It seems older generations have fouled it up enough, we have started wars, fouled our air and water and failed to solve many of the problems that have persisted in our culture for centuries.

So it's up to you. Here's to wishing you success as you start your adult lives.

The Renewable Fuel Standard

Can the 'Tyranny of the Status Quo' Be Broken?

Free market economist Milton Friedman explained how government subsidies are hard to dislodge, once in-place. With concentrated benefits and diffused costs, the status quo can become tyrannical in that a few winners have great incentive to continue their raid on millions of taxpayers.

In Iowa, presidential contender Ted Cruz recently made headlines by slamming the ethanol mandate. Politically, it was a gamble. Iowa isn't just home to the first big presidential test -- it's a big corn-growing state. That combination has long made for toxic public policy, a tyranny of the status quo.

But Cruz was spot on. The federal Renewable Fuel Standard requires that some of the fuel Americans pump into their gas tanks come from renewable sources. In practice, that means corn-based ethanol. But the policy drives up food and gas prices and hurts the environment.

The RFS drives up consumer prices in two major areas. The first is food. Corn is an important ingredient in everything from livestock feed to sodas.

In 2000, before the ethanol mandate went into effect, more than 90 percent of this country's corn fed people and livestock all over the world. Less than 5 percent was used for ethanol.

By 2013, thanks to the RFS, 40 percent of the U.S. corn crop was diverted to make ethanol, 45 percent fed livestock, and only the remaining 15 percent was set aside for food. Consumers end up paying more because of the decline in supply available for food use.

The second major impact of the RFS is prices at the pump. The reason for this is simple: Ethanol contains about one-third less energy than gas, which far outbalances its slightly lower per-gallon cost. When ethanol is blended into gas, therefore, a full tank doesn't last as long.

One of the reasons Congress gave for passing the RFS was to reduce carbon dioxide emissions

Robert Bradley Jr.

Institute for Energy Research

from fuel.

But it turns out ethanol may actually increase overall CO2 emissions. In 2011, the National Research Council concluded that "production and use of ethanol to displace gasoline is likely to increase air pollutants such as particulate matter, ozone and sulfur oxides."

For these reasons, many environmental groups, including the National Resources Defense Council and the Environmental Working Group, oppose ethanol.

Petroleum transportation fuels have outgrown the "market failure" charge of social costs exceeding private benefits. By 2017, smog-forming emissions from vehicles will have fallen by 99.4 percent since 1970.

As these emissions have fallen, air quality has improved. Since 1970, the aggregate emissions of the six most common pollutants -- including carbon monoxide, lead, and sulfur dioxide -- have dropped by more than two-thirds.

Ethanol is also supposed to reduce America's reliance on foreign oil. But here, the fracking boom has been far more effective. From 2005 to 2014, biofuel production increased by 1,566 trillion BTUs, but oil production increased four-to-five times more. In the last decade, too, America's net petroleum imports fell from 60 percent to 38 percent.

According to a report by NERA Economic Consulting, enforcing the RFS as written would cause a $770 billion hit to U.S. GDP.

It's time for Congress to step up and take the lead in doing away with this ill-advised policy -- and presidential aspirants, Republican and Democrat, should stand up to the tyranny of the status quo.

one to sign a statement of faith."

It is apparent that Ark Encounter cannot or will not keep its word regarding its benefits. Since Ark Encounter has been considerably scaled-down since it was first proposed, there will be nowhere near 900 jobs.

In August 2014 the hiring discrimination of Ark Encounter was uncovered and the state eventually refused to provide the Ark a tax incentive. Ark Encounter wants to require potential employees sign a statement of faith <https://answeringgenesis.org/about/faith/> that excludes all but extreme fundamentalist Christians from employment. Even in as a conservative community as Williamstown, most citizens will not pass the religious test for an Ark Encounter job.

Since Ark Encounter has reneged on its word not to discriminate in hiring, it could do the ethical thing and return the money and land obtained under false pretenses. Such an action does not seem likely.

Unfortunately, Grant County and Williamstown politicians do not appear motivated to remedy this situation and continue to promote what is essentially a fundamentalist Christian ministry that will discriminate in hiring.

Dry Ridge High School meets for 68th reunion

The Dry Ridge High School Alumni Association met for the 68th reunion at 1 p.m. on April 25 at the Dry Ridge Christian Church Fellowship Hall. There were 26 members and guests present. A delicious meal was served by the Dry Ridge Christian Church's Women's Fellowship. The group was welcomed by Donna House, president from the class of 1953. The invocation was given by Joel Hubbard, class of 1950.

All attending were introduced and spoke of their years attending Dry Ridge High. There were classes from 1950, 1951, 1952 and 1953 in attendance. The oldest member, Caroline Vice Ransdell, class of 1928 and 104 years young was unable to attend this year. A short business session followed and Betty S. Brewer Flege, class of 1953, read the minutes and was approved as read. Treasurer report by Norma Osborne Hedges, class of 1953 was given.

As a result of declining attendance and advancing age of those who do attend, it was decided by majority vote and after some discussion to discontinue further banquets of the Dry Ridge High School Alumni.

DOWN AND DIRTY

Perennial hardy geraniums

My interest in hardy geraniums started in about 1996. In European gardens they were as commonplace as phlox was in American perennial gardens. Twenty years later and hardy geraniums are available in all their glory at most garden centers. Experience has taught us which ones are suited to our warm summer climate.

Most of us think of geraniums as an annual that we plant in our yards or in pots to add color to our patios during the summer months. Well, this plant is actually a Pelargonium. The confusion over the name can be attributed to the father of modern taxonomy, Carl Linnaeus, who insisted on lumping Geranium and Pelargonium into one "Geranium" category. Over time the term was only associated with Pelargonium and the true geranium lost its popularity (and identity). Another story I heard was that Queen Victoria remarked, in an off-handed way, how lovely a geranium was in someone's garden she was visiting. The Queen gestured to a Pelargonium and no one was inclined to correct her.

The true geranium is a perennial and is native to just about every continent. Today there are hundreds of varieties of hardy geraniums: a size and form for every location in your garden. Most gardeners who enjoy perennials are certainly familiar with the robust, mound-forming Geranium sanguineum (bloody cranesbill) and Geranium 'Johnson's Blue' with its airy mass of finely cut foliage and a healthy spray of lavender-blue blossoms that are one of the first to appear in the spring. These are great garden plants but let's face it, there are better ones to be had by the geranium enthusiast.

There are some tested varieties that are favorites for gardeners across the country and one that remains a favorite is Geranium 'Rozanne'. It performs well in Kentuckiana gardens because 'Rozanne' is quite tolerant of heat and humidity and has the longest season of bloom of any cultivated geranium variety. 'Rozanne', actually the first hardy geranium to be patented, has faintly marbled green leaves and large (up to 2 1/2 inch) blue-violet blooms that fade to white in the center. 'Rozanne' has subtle beauty that lasts from June through October. It is a strong bloomer in early summer and if you remove the spent blooms it will bloom again in late summer into fall. And, as I mentioned, it tolerates heat much better than other similar hardy geranium species. The plant remains compact so it is perfect for the front of the border where it can be enjoyed as a specimen plant in the garden.

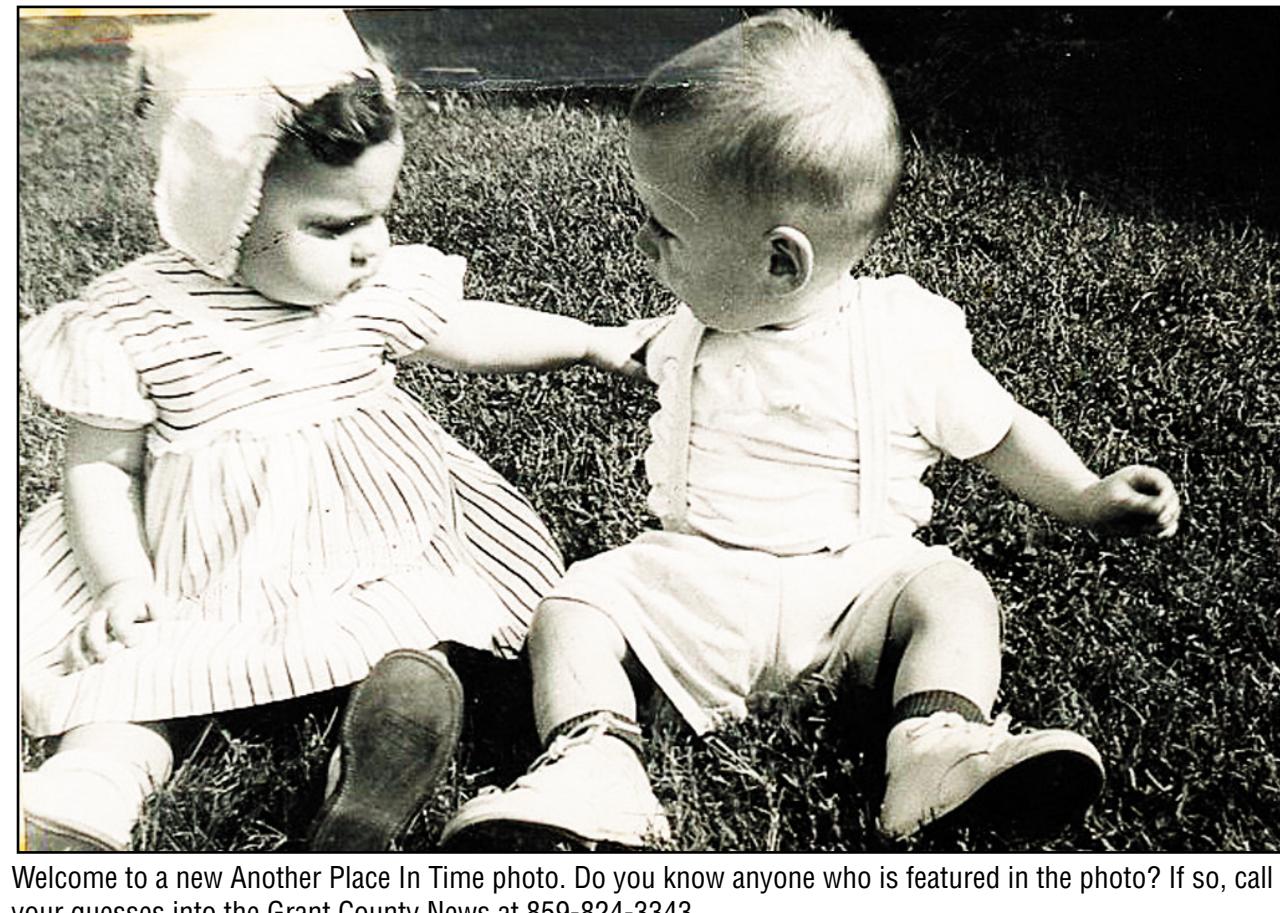

There are also varieties that act as great ground covers for dry areas that are difficult to maintain or prove to be trouble spots for other plants. G. macrorrhizum is a good species for tough areas. 'Bevan's Variety' and 'Ingwersen's Variety' provide a rosy-red or light pink blossom. And, G. cantabrigiense 'Biokovo' remains the favorite for the toughest groundcover in full sun. 'Biokovo' has white blooms with a flush of pink and slightly glossy foliage, which helps it hold up in the heat. Like many hardy geraniums, 'Biokovo' also has good fall color.

If you like a more naturalized look in your shade garden G. phaeum is a good species. A newer cultivar named 'Samobor' has variegated leaves and masses of maroon bloom. I have had this variety for several years and it blooms well throughout the season. Another one that I like for part-shade is G. maculatum 'Espresso' which has pink blooms atop deeply cut chocolate-green foliage.

Basically there are hundreds of hardy geraniums to choose from, even Geranium palustre for wet soils, so if you are looking for a great plant for the mixed border, the shade garden or as a ground-cover check out hardy geraniums. Many of the mentioned varieties are available at local nurseries but if you want a 100 plus selection, check out the California nursery Geraniaceae at www.geraniaceae.com.

FAITH & VALUES

RELIGIOUS VIEWS

The choice is yours

It is a plain principle even among the likes of people that have grown up around farming, or have mothers, like my own, who like to keep a garden. The principle is simplistic but yet so profound, and it is that principle of what you plant is exactly what you're going to get when the seed grows. If the farmer plants corn, he will not get a pumpkin in its place, but he will get corn. If mom plants a rose bush, in the next season lilies will not grow. In the place of the rosebush, but it will be more roses.

What grows is the result of what was first planted. The Bible uses this same principle called sowing and reaping. Paul's words alone give a precise explanation as the Apostle proclaims, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting."

And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Paul is metaphorically speaking of sowing to the flesh and spirit. He means that we can either bring corruption or life to ourselves by the choices we make. Bad decision such as lying, gossip, drugs, or adultery cause pain, hate, anger, and generational curses to spring up in our lives and the lives of those we influence.

On the flip side, good decisions cause seeds of happiness, peace, joy and freedom to flourish in us. In the book of Ruth, a woman of God, Naomi, had two daughter-in-laws named Ruth and Orpah.

As famine and death covered the land of Moab, where they dwelt, Naomi wanted to go back to her hometown of Bethlehem, where there were plenty of fertile ground and life was more relevant.

Ruth loved Naomi and told her that she would follow Naomi and take on her lifestyle that they live in Bethlehem, and serve her God, which was Jehovah. Ruth and Orpah had grown up in Moab, where they did not serve Jehovah, and instead of choosing to follow the woman of God and serve the Lord, Orpah decided to stay in her homeland to continue life in famine and serve false Gods.

According to history, Orpah later married a Philistine, conceived a daughter who would end up marrying a man of the Anakim people, a race of giants. Orpah's daughter is believed to have been the mother of Goliath.

However, Ruth married a man from

Bethlehem named Boaz, who begat Obed, who begat Jesse, and begat who we know as the little shepherd boy David. Two sisters made two different choices.

Orpah's bad decision caused God's enemy to be birthed. Ruth's good decision brought forth one of the greatest kings

the world will ever know. "Sow to yourselves in righteousness and reap in mercy," the prophet Hosea penned. The Psalmist wrote, "Those who sow in tears shall reap in joy." The choice is yours, sow bad seeds in your life and reap the same, or sow good seeds and reap life everlasting.

I am glad Ruth made the right decision;

it utterly destroyed a giant, subdued kingdoms, and later down the line, in the same family was a man named Joseph born, who later married the young lady Mary and bore the savior of the entire world, JESUS!

Good decisions hold great power! We all want to portray Ruth's courage and obedience, but when it comes down to it, what will you decide?

The Grant County Schools Career and Technology Center, now in its fourth year, is establishing itself as a "go to" center for regional employers to find and develop qualified, young recruits.

Among the entities looking at the CTC students is the Kentucky Federation for Advanced Manufacturing Education (KY FAME). KY FAME is a company-sponsored partnership of regional employers who share the goals of creating a pipeline for high-demand, highly-skilled workers.

Employers actually start training students while they are still in school, then upon graduation provide employment and all-expense-paid post-secondary training in an official apprenticeship program. The KY FAME employers have worked with Gateway Community and Technical College to develop a dual-track, five semester Advanced Manufacturing Technician (AMT) Associate Degree program that addresses the specific needs of the student and employer. The hands-on experience, coupled with classroom training provides these recruits with direct access to high-paying advanced manufacturing jobs.

Grant falls 17-2 to South Oldham in regionals

By Mickey Patterson
Sentinel News

If hitting is contagious then the South Oldham High School baseball team was happy to share Wednesday as they rolled to a 17-2 win over Grant County in the 8th Region tourney semi-finals. After scoring three runs in the top of the first inning, the Dragons exploded for seven runs in the second and five more in the third to put the Braves away. "We just came out hot and exploded," South Oldham coach Todd Driskell said. "Honestly, Grant County competed. The ball had eyes for us tonight, they didn't really make errors. We hit it where they ain't so to speak."

The Dragons pushed across three runs in the first off Grant County starter Daniel Gillum when Dylan Smith laced a deep one-out triple to center field. He scored on Tanner Johnson's line drive single to center. William Moriarty kept it going with a single to left before Brayden Sisson scored Johnson with a deep double to center. Moriarty plated the final run when he scored on a passed ball.

After South Oldham starter John Lowery shut Grant down in order in their half of the first, the Dragons put the game out of reach with the seven-run second inning.

Devin Bishop started the rally with a bloop single to right field, stole second and scored on Smith double to center. Johnson drew a walk and Moriarty reached when he was hit by a pitch from relief pitcher Austin Johnson. Sisson scored a run with a sacrifice fly and the next run scored when pinch runner Tyler Fitch raced home as Moriarty stole second.

Blake Bisig made it 7-0 with a one-hop double off the left field wall. Nathan Straker was hit by a pitch and Jacob Shultz drew a walk to load the bases. Starr Thompson drew a walk to score a run and Bishop made it 10-0 with a single to right field.

The Dragons came back with five more in the third inning with two outs. Back-to-back doubles from Sisson and Bisig made it 11-0 and Straker scored Sisson with a single to right. Schultz was hit by a pitch and Thompson drove in a run with a single. The final two runs came when Bishop doubled to right field for the 15-0 lead.

South got its final two runs in the fourth on a bases loaded hit batter and single from Schultz. Grant managed two runs in the fourth inning when Jason Goe lofted a deep shot to center that was dropped allowing him to reach third and scored on a single from Hunter Lawson. The final run came across on an infield error.

"It's high school baseball, anything can happen," Driskell said. "We're just happy to be playing well at the right time."

Austin Johnson winds up for the pitch against South Oldham.

There were previously no summer camps through the parks department.

The camps began as a partnership with Clemons and Jill Marksberry-Thomass, who was then with Grant County Community Education, along with family resource centers at Grant and Williamstown schools.

The parks department received a mental health grant from KEYS that helped purchase inflatable water slides and provide some scholarships for children to attend the camps.

Clemons said there was an average of about 100 Little Dipper campers and between 100 to 125 Summer Splash campers.

"This was a program that we all acknowledge it was a great program," Kimmich said. "It was a signature program for the parks department. It will be back in a fairly similar form. I don't know that we'll use the same name because I don't think it's appropriate to take what was a signature program, retool it and bring it back under the same name. But, yes, we will be bringing back a summer camp next year once we have a full year under our belt to get things up and running and ensure we provide quality."

Magistrate Jacqalynn Riley said both Summer Splash and Little Dippers have a lot of heritage within the community.

While the budget restraints have presented a challenge, Riley said a bigger issue is communication.

"In my opinion, I think when things come about

I think it's important to be proactive and let the citizens of the community know what programming will be taking place, especially if something is being taken away," she said.

Kimmich said he will admits that it was a mistake how the information about the camp cancellations were rolled out.

However, he said he hopes the community is patient and participates in the programs the park will provide this summer.

"We're trying to put together an abbreviated recreation plan for this year that incorporates programs for all the citizens," Kimmich said. "Then, we'll come back next year with a more robust plan but one where we have time to go out a solicit money to ensure that the integrity of the programs remain intact."

"I felt confident in our results on election night and didn't anticipate any changes during the canvass. Our numbers were reported correctly on election night and the canvass granted us the opportunity to double check our process," Clemons said.

State Rep. Brian Linder, R-Dry Ridge, was one of only two outside of the board and clerk office staff in attendance at the canvass.

Linder said he was there on behalf of fellow state representative Quarles of Scott County.

The canvass reemphasized Linder's confidence in the election process.

"Not only in Grant County, but throughout the state of Kentucky, all totals for the governor's race proved correct," Linder said. "Voters can rest assured that our election process and results are fair and accurate. These close races also demonstrate that every vote counts. Eighty-three votes separate the top two gubernatorial candidates. There are over 22 precincts in Grant County, Sherman Tavern also rents spaces in their front yard, next to Sherman Elementary, to raise funds to continue restoration efforts at the historic building.

"We're hoping it just continues to grow and expand bringing more people to our community and allowing local people, businesses and groups to make some extra money," Wigginton said.

meaning if four more people in each precinct had voted just in Grant County, the outcome could have been different for the entire state. Just over 9 percent of voters in Grant County turned out. People need to realize their vote does matter and they should exercise this right of freedom."
